

A Grasslands Food Chain

The grasslands food chain includes the producers, consumers and decomposers. The decomposers keep the plants or producers healthy. The producers or plants are consumed by the primary consumers, which then are consumed by the secondary consumers, and the tertiary consumers are at the top of the food chain.

